“Working Effectively with Elderly Clients and their Families”

Join us to hear Dr. Rosemary Lubinski, Ph.D., as she discusses “Working Effectively with Elderly Clients and their Families.” Dr. Lubinski will discuss demographic characteristics and the values of communication for the elderly and their communication partners. Through participation in the lecture, attendees will learn about common communication difficulties and communication environments of the elderly. Participants will also learn about strategies for effective communication with these individuals and will receive suggestions for enhancing the communication environment of elders.

Learning Objectives:
As a result of attending this lecture, participants will be able to:

1. Define the demographic characteristics of the aging population.

2. List the values of communication for the elderly and their communication partners.

3. Define the common communication difficulties of elders and provide strategies for effective communication with these individuals.
